Rotating Staff in Rome

• 500 staff members as a result of Bloomberg Associates’ engagement with Rome

• Staff rotation is recommended by UNCAC, which Italy joined in 2009

• Used in public and private sectors to increase productivity and prevent and disrupt corrupt activity

• Changing workflows prevent schemes from developing, and disrupt existing problematic activity enabled by too-familiar relationships between public servants and the public

• Rotation also ensures that no one person manages key aspects of City business for an undue length of time
