

LL.M. SUPPLEMENT TO THE
PUBLIC INTEREST
JOB SEARCH TOOLKIT

HOW TO USE THIS GUIDE

The “LL.M. Supplement to the Public Interest Job Search Toolkit” is a guide that provides career advice and practical ideas to prepare LL.M. students interest in careers in public interest law. It is intended to be used with SJI’s Public Interest Job Search Toolkit and the “International Supplement to the Public Interest Job Search Toolkit.”

In addition to using this guide, students are encouraged to learn more about SJI and available online resources on our website, law.columbia.edu/social-justice. Our advising staff are available to speak with you about job search. Information on each of our advisors and how to make an individual appointment is available on our website.

PRIVATELY PRINTED FOR THE EXCLUSIVE USE OF STUDENTS AND ALUMNI OF
THE COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY SCHOOL OF LAW

Not for Publication
All Rights Reserved

2019-2020

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Welcome	2
General Overview	3
Exploring Public Interest at Columbia: Developing Knowledge and Experience	3
How do I explore public interest opportunities at Columbia Law School?	3
Should I do a term-time internship or pro bono?	4
Should I think about clinics and externships?	4
Should I join a journal's staff?	5
International LL.M.s, Keep in Mind: Visa Implications of Internships	6
LL.M. Job Search Basics	7
Transitioning from Corporate to Public Interest During Your LL.M. Year	7
LL.M. Job Search Timetable	9
Public Interest Resumes and Cover Letters	12
“Americanized” Public Interest Resume Checklist	13
Sample LL.M. Resumes	14
Sample LL.M. Cover Letter and Resume Pairings	18
Final Words: LL.M. Narratives	27
Amancio (Tutu) Alicante LL.M. '04 (Equatorial Guinea)	27
Anna Marie Bulman LL.M. '15 (Australia)	28
Su Anne Lee LL.M. '17 (Malaysia)	29
Tehtena Mebratu-Tsegaye LL.M. '14 (Sierra Leone/UK)	30
Sofia Minieri LL.M. '16 (Argentina)	31
Deepa Nambiar LL.M. '13 (Malaysia)	32

WELCOME

Welcome to Columbia Law School and Social Justice Initiatives (SJI). We are excited to have you as a member of the Law School community, and of the public interest community in particular. Most of our foreign-trained LL.M.s return to their home countries upon completion of their studies at Columbia or pursue private sector opportunities. SJI looks forward to working with those of you who want to pursue public service either on a full-time or pro bono basis.

As experienced attorneys you have much to offer the domestic and international public interest fields. Your LL.M. year is an exciting time to explore and consider how to use your knowledge, skills, and commitment to further domestic and international public interest work. However, as you embark on your chosen career path, you may find that you have more questions than answers because of the array of issues, career paths, and settings in which you can work. If you know what you want to do, we can help you identify your goal and develop a plan and tools to help you achieve it. As you begin on your search, however, it is important to recognize that opportunities to pursue full-time public interest positions with U.S. nonprofit organizations or government agencies are very limited.

During this year and after graduation, we will guide you through the job search process through one-on-one counseling and a series of coordinated programs and workshops on creating U.S. and international application materials and developing strong interviewing skills and techniques. SJI also will work with you throughout the year by forwarding information about opportunities, SJI programs, employer-hosted events, and professional development workshops.

SJI has a large advising staff of full- and part-time lawyers who have different expertise areas and backgrounds. You can meet with as many of us that are of interest to you, and you can meet with us multiple times. Information about us, including how to make an appointment, is available on SJI's website, law.columbia.edu/social-justice.

We look forward to working with and getting to know you!

GENERAL OVERVIEW

This booklet supplements SJI's Public Interest Job Search Toolkit by providing information of particular relevance to LL.M.s. It will serve as a guide as you explore and develop your interests and options in domestic and/or international public interest work. It also will help you prepare to seek specific public interest positions. It is meant to be used in conjunction with the Toolkit for U.S. public interest positions and with the "International Supplement to the Public Interest Job Search Toolkit" if you are interested in working internationally.

Exploring Public Interest at Columbia: Developing Knowledge and Experience

How Do I Explore Public Interest Opportunities at Columbia Law School?

During your LL.M. year, there are many opportunities to explore domestic and international public interest law. Here are some suggestions to consider:

- Attend public interest programming (including SJI Mondays and other SJI panels and programs, which you will learn about via SJI's Monday Newsletters, email, and LawCal) and begin networking with students, professors, SJI staff, and practitioners
- Participate in student organizations dedicated to public interest
- Explore pro bono projects¹ to take on during the semester or over winter or spring break, and participate in a term-time public interest internship
- Take clinics and externships, as well as other public interest classes, such as seminars and courses
- Work on a public interest journal
- Serve as a research assistant for a professor
- Consider attending job fairs like the Equal Justice Works Fair \(EJW\), held in Washington, DC in October, and the Public Interest Legal Career Fair \(PILC\), held at NYU in February²
- For those of you interested in postgraduate careers in the U.S., remember that securing public interest or government employment without a U.S. J.D. degree and/or U.S. citizenship is especially difficult; public interest employers rarely sponsor visa applications. There are opportunities, however, to gain valuable experience through volunteer work. Doing relevant volunteer legal work as soon as possible is one of the best ways to network with public interest organizations and enhance your qualifications.

¹ For more information on Columbia's pro bono program and state pro bono requirements for bar admission, see law.columbia.edu/social-justice/students/pro-bono. The words "pro bono" and "internships" often are used to mean the same thing: volunteer legal work at a nonprofit organization or government agency. Sometimes, "pro bono" indicates a specific project and "internship" means working in the office for a specified period of time (e.g., one day per week) on a variety of projects. How much you do is an individual decision based on your goals for your LL.M. year and after graduation, how much practical experience you obtained before you came to Columbia, how efficiently you study, your other work or life obligations, and other factors.

² For more information on networking at public interest job fairs, see the section in the Public Interest Job Search Toolkit on networking and table talk.

- Start planning for postgraduate employment by researching fellowships and funding opportunities beginning in the fall semester, and begin applying for any fellowships and jobs that you are qualified for. Be sure to check for early application deadlines. SJI's end-of-the-week job emails will alert you to opportunities and deadlines. Think about creative ways to raise funding for the work you want to do and set up an appointment with SJI advisors to come up with a strategy for fellowships and job applications. You should also use the job search timeline in this supplement to help you map out your job search strategy.

Should I Do a Term-Time Internship or Pro Bono?

You should definitely consider doing term-time internships. It is one of the best ways to get valuable experience and become known to public interest employers. Columbia Law School students have a big advantage by being in NYC: there are many excellent public interest opportunities at our doorstep. Doing a term-time internship is invaluable for building up skills, contacts and knowledge about “real jobs” in public interest. Many organizations welcome LL.M. students. We are happy to work with you to identify organizations that would serve your interests and goals.

If you plan to seek admission to the New York State Bar, you will have to complete 50 hours of qualifying pro bono service before you apply to the bar. Your service can be done after you graduate and even after you take the bar exam. (Those of you who did qualifying pro bono or took a law school clinic that did qualifying work within one year of the start of the LL.M. program may have already satisfied the New York requirement.) More information about the 50-hour rule is available on the Bar's website; you may also find it helpful to visit SJI's pro bono page and/or contact our pro bono staff with questions or for advising.

Even if you have satisfied the 50-hour requirement or do not plan to apply for admission to the New York State Bar, pro bono service is an excellent way to use your education to assist people in need, develop professional contacts and skills, and work with others who share your concerns and beliefs.

Should I Think About Clinics and Externships?

Doing a clinic or externship is an important curricular experience you can get at Columbia. It will help you develop knowledge and skills which will be directly applicable to many public interest jobs. It also demonstrates your interest in, and commitment to, public interest work. Finally, it will enable you to get to know public interest professors and practitioners really well, as well as provide you with a source of mentorship. However, clinics and externships take a lot of time and use a lot of academic credits, so they might not be the best option for you. They also typically receive a very high number of applications so you cannot reasonably rely on getting into one of them. A good alternative is undertaking an independent externship, for which you may earn some academic credit by registering under the direction of a Columbia Law School faculty member.

Are There Certain Classes I Should Take?

There are many other class offerings which can expand your knowledge of domestic and international public interest topics, or help hone skills which would be useful in your public interest work. You should think carefully about which classes to take, and meet with an SJI or Graduate Legal Studies \(GLS\) advisor to discuss the best classes for you. There are no “mandatory” classes for getting a public interest job. In determining your academic schedule, consider cross-listing at other Columbia University schools, such as:

- School of International Public Affairs \(SIPA\)
- Mailman School of Public Health
- Columbia University Institute for the Study of Human Rights
- Columbia Business School (entrepreneurship courses)
- Columbia School of Journalism

Additionally, for those of you who would like to work in a country other than your own, consider taking a language course if that is a skill that will be useful to your work, and time permits in your regular academic schedule (as such courses do not count toward the LL.M. degree requirements). If you are considering taking a language course, speak with your GLS academic advisor for more information.

Should I Join a Journal's Staff?

Working on a journal can be interesting and satisfying work, especially if it focuses on a topic you are interested in. It can also be a significant time commitment. Public interest employers generally value public interest journals over business-related journals. However, some public interest employers—particularly those that do direct representation, advocacy, and grassroots work—do not value journal work as much as clinics, externships, or internships. Judges, academic institutions, and employers whose practice involves extensive legal analysis and writing look particularly favorably upon journals. Publishing a note or other legal research and writing experiences are also of interest to them.

International LL.M.s, Keep in Mind: Visa Implications of Internships

International students interested in pursuing term-time internships or pro bono projects in the U.S. during the fall or spring semester should be mindful that pursuing such opportunities may impact their visa status or ability to remain in the U.S. to work or volunteer after graduation. SJI advises that all international students speak with Dean Sylvia Polo in Graduate Legal Studies or with an officer in the International Students and Scholars Office \(ISSO\) at Columbia University prior to commencing an internship or pro-bono project. ISSO is located on Columbia University's campus at:

International House North
524 Riverside Drive, 1st Floor
New York, NY 10027
(212) 854-3587
isso.columbia.edu

Additional information can be found on the Internet:

- An “Overview of F-1 and J-1 Student Regulations” on the ISSO website
- The U.S. Citizens and Immigration Services website at uscis.gov

LL.M. JOB SEARCH BASICS

At SJI, we believe the best career advice is that there is no single path to a successful domestic or international public interest career. In general, domestic or international public interest careers tend to be more idiosyncratic than private sector ones; as the public interest fields continue to evolve and adjust to the times, you have more opportunity to create your own journey. Some people graduate, go to one organization, and stay there for an entire career. Others switch jobs every few years, building skills and developing interests in one job that lead them to the next.

As you think about where you would like to work, you should assess your individual skills as well as your interests and goals and think about what competencies you would like to develop in the first years of your post-LL.M. career. Most LL.M. graduates can use their prior work and educational experiences, courses, clinics, and internships to construct multiple narratives that show they are qualified for a variety of jobs.

We realize that the process, particularly the timing of obtaining this first post-LL.M. job, is often anxiety-filled. The first thing you should know is that the domestic and international public interest job search is quite different from a private sector search. Domestic and international public interest employers hire according to their own budgets and needs, so the timetable differs for each employer. Public interest LL.M.s need to have patience and a willingness to live with some anxiety, as they will usually not obtain a job until much later than those working in the private sector. That said, there are a few ways to approach the job search process strategically, which are outlined in the timetable on the next page. SJI is also here to help you navigate the process and develop an effective strategy based on your personal and professional goals.

Transitioning from Corporate to Public Interest During Your LL.M. Year

If you came to Columbia with the goal of making a transition from corporate law to public interest law, there are a few things that you should keep in mind. First, it is never too early to start setting up informational interviews with public interest lawyers who are doing the work you would like to be doing. You should reach out to Columbia graduates or current students who have worked at organizations you are interested in, and introduce yourself to your professors. The advisors at SJI can help you find current students and graduates who are working in public interest.

Most public interest organizations value a strong demonstrated commitment to public service. If you have not demonstrated a commitment to public interest through your work experience before law school, you can demonstrate your commitment at Columbia through your course choices and participation in clinics, externships, internships, and pro bono projects. For those with few public interest contacts, establishing a connection to the public interest community at Columbia is paramount. Attend public interest events and network with Columbia students, professors, graduates, and guest speakers who are on campus or work in New York. You should also join public interest student groups, such as Rightslink or SPIN, and reach out early and often to the advisors at SJI.

If you do not have a good public interest writing sample or lack experience in the field you are interested in entering, seek out classes and writing opportunities that will fill in those gaps. Professors and Columbia centers such as the Human Rights Institute, the Institute for the Study of Human Rights, and the Columbia Center on Sustainable Investment often seek student assistance with projects during the school year. Additionally, the School of International and Public Affairs (SIPA) offers Capstone classes that provide students with interesting opportunities to gain field experience during the semester or over semester breaks.

You should also use social media channels such as LinkedIn, Twitter, Instagram, and Facebook to your advantage. For example, even if you do not currently have a Twitter account, it can be useful to set one up in order to follow organizations where you might seek jobs. Monitoring an organization's Twitter feed can give you valuable insight into the organization's current projects, partners, goals, and culture, which you can use to craft stronger application materials. Also, many organizations post current job opportunities to their social media accounts.

The transition from corporate to public interest work is not always an easy one to make, but once you find your first position in public interest, it often is easier to find the next. Talking to attorneys who have successfully made the transition and SJI advisors will help you plan a successful strategy.

LL.M. Job Search Timetable

September

- Attend Introduction to Domestic Public Interest Resumes and Cover Letters.
- Attend the Public Interest Legal Career Reception at Fordham Law School.
- Attend SJI Mondays and other public interest events and begin to network with presenters, faculty, and fellow law students.
- Submit your resume to SJI's LL.M. resume review portal.
- Sign up for an appointment with a SJI advisor to discuss your interests and review your cover letter and resume.
- Consider applying for an internship or pro bono project. Consult psjd.org to learn about prospective organizations.
- Sign up for email lists that provide information about relevant opportunities such as psjd.org, asil.org, reliefweb.int, Hrights.opportunities-list@mailman.yale.edu, or humanrightscolumbia.org.
- Consider attending the Equal Justice Works Fair \(EJW\) in October if you are interested in learning about domestic public interest work.³
- Start looking at job opportunities that are currently posted at organizations of interest to become familiar with the skills, experiences, and material you will need to apply for similar positions in the future.

October

- Attend the Equal Justice Works Fair in Washington, DC in October if you are interested in domestic public interest work.
- Attend the clinic and externship information sessions and consider applying to participate in a spring clinic or externship.
- Build a collection of bookmarks in your browser with the employment sections of organizations of interest so that you can visit them frequently to better understand their hiring regularity, methods, and requirements.
- Follow organizations you are interested in on social media channels, such as Facebook, Twitter, Instagram, and YouTube. Keep up with current advocacy, initiatives, and partnerships that the organizations are pursuing and use that information to plan your job search strategy. Look for opportunities to attend events that the organizations are hosting. Many NGOs also post current job opportunities on their social media accounts.
- Continue to network. Talk to presenters and professors who are working in fields of interest to you.
- Reach out to Columbia Law School alumni and schedule informational interviews. SJI advisors can help you connect.
- Begin applying to relevant fellowships and jobs.
- Create a chart to keep track of internship and job search efforts. Some students find it helpful to construct a chart with four categories: 1) date of application; 2) group and position; 3) contact person; 4) result/notes. See the Public Interest Job Search Toolkit for an example.

³ While most employers at EJW are seeking summer interns, they also have informational tables (table talks) which are an excellent opportunity to learn about the organizations and to network.

November

- Sign up to participate in the Public Interest Legal Career Fair \(PILC\), which takes place in New York every February.⁴ The period to register and apply to interview with employers attending the fair runs from December 1 to January 16.
- Attend SJI networking events, which are advertised in SJI newsletters and weekly emails.
- Continue to attend relevant public interest and international programs.
- Continue to network.
- Identify which spring public or international public interest classes you want to take.
- Consider finding a winter break pro bono opportunity or internship domestically or abroad between semesters.

December

- Focus on studying for and taking your exams. Good luck!
- Consider using winter break to network and/or do pro bono work/short-term internships.
- Enjoy the holidays!

January

- Continue to meet with SJI advisors to practice your interviewing skills.
- Continue to use SJI's job email alerts and listservs to identify employers and send them your applications.
- Sign up for an internship or pro bono project for spring semester.
- Continue to network and attend Columbia public interest programs.
- Polish your application materials and select a writing sample that reflects your best legal writing.
- Network with potential fellowship sponsors and begin preparing and submitting postgraduate fellowship applications
- Continue to apply for jobs and fellowships. Keep your application tracking chart updated.

February

- Participate in the PILC Fair at NYU.
- Follow up on applications you have already submitted and reach out to employers.
- Continue your job search and applications.

March

- Follow up with applications you have already submitted.

⁴ While most employers at PILC are seeking summer interns, they also have informational tables ("table talks"), which are an excellent opportunity to learn about organizations and to network.

- Continue your job search and applications.
- Stay in touch with your SJI advisor.

April

- Follow up with applications you have already submitted.
- Continue your job search and applications.
- Stay in touch with your SJI advisor.

May

- Focus on completing your papers and your exams.
- Graduation!

Summer

- Focus on the bar exam, if you are taking one.
- Continue to work with your SJI advisor—we are here all summer.

After Graduation

- Continue to use SJI as a resource and be sure to stay in touch!

PUBLIC INTEREST RESUMES AND COVER LETTERS

You may have to compile an entirely new U.S.-appropriate resume for any internships or jobs with U.S. employers if your resume is based on a different model. These resumes do not list your entire educational and professional background or include long publication and presentation lists. In addition to being much shorter, U.S. resumes should never include personal information such as age, marital status, height, or photos. Moreover, because U.S. employers are likely to be unfamiliar with the education system in your home country, you may need to translate and “Americanize” your educational and work experiences by adding explanatory notes such as “equivalent to a J.D. degree” or an “honor given to the highest-scoring student.”

SJI’s Public Interest Job Search Toolkit contains advice on crafting “American” public interest cover letters and provides examples. While this supplement includes a few sample resumes and cover letters, you should also refer to the Toolkit for a more extensive selection. If you have minimal public interest experience (with mostly corporate experience) prior to entering the LL.M. program, review the 1L cover letter examples as a guide. If you have significant experience prior to the LL.M. program, see the cover letter examples for 3Ls and alumni. LL.M. students applying for international jobs should use the “International Supplement to the Public Interest Job Search Toolkit” for internationalizing your resume in accordance with the Columbia Law School format. You will also find a C.V. template for applying for positions with international governmental organizations such as the United Nations.

SJI advisors are available to help you further refine your resume as needed. If you apply to jobs in different fields or that require different skills, you will likely need multiple versions of your resume. To get started, fictionalized samples of LL.M. resumes and cover letters are presented on the following pages. Everyone’s resume is different, so the following resumes are meant to serve as useful examples. Take note of the resume formatting and types of work experiences and skills demonstrated. To help you get your professional experiences organized with appropriate formatting, please utilize the Resume Checklist on the next page.

“Americanized” Public Interest Resume Checklist

FORMAT

- The document is one page in length (you can go on to a second page if special circumstances exist, such as if you graduated more than five years ago or have extensive publications)
- 11- or 12-point font (such as Times New Roman, Calibri, or Garamond) with generous margins
- NO Typos or grammatical errors
- Format is similar to our samples
- Resume is not cluttered and is easy to read

CONTENT

- The resume has a top header and Education and Experience sections
- Your contact information is professional and up to date
- The resume is tailored to the job you are seeking
- All relevant jobs, volunteer work, and activities are included
- You have included pro bono work, internships, externships, clinics, journals, on-campus organizations, and research for a professor
- There are no “Interests” (unless special circumstances exist) or “Objective” sections
- You have not included computer skills, classes (except clinics), or grades (except honors)
- All high school information has been removed (see an SJI advisor if special circumstances exist)
- You have included (if applicable) Languages, Bar Membership, and Publications

Sample LL.M. Resumes

Sample LL.M. Resume—Before

GERALD GRAFF

222 West 121st Street, Apt 3K, New York, NY 10027, USA
+ 1 (212)555-6677, gdg323@columbia.edu

EDUCATION

Columbia Law School, New York, NY.

LL.M. expected May 2015

Activities: European Union Law Moot Court team member, Columbia Society for International Law, Career Symposium Committee, Columbia University Wine Club, RightsLink, ACLU, CJAN

The Interdisciplinary Center (IDC), Herzliya, Israel

Master of Law, LL.M.

Bachelor of Law, LL.B.

Bachelor of Arts, B.A. (Business Management), major in Financial Risk Management

- 2nd in class of 200 students
- Law Review, Editor-In-Chief
- Teaching Assistant ; Contracts (LL.B.), Finance (B.A.)
- Research Assistant to Hon. Elisheva Barak, Vice President of the Israeli National Labor Court
- Exchange program, Heinrich-Heine-Universitat Dusseldorf, Germany

PROFESSIONAL EXPERIENCE

Meitar Liquornik Geva & Leshem Brandweing LLP, Ramat Gan, Israel Sept. 2013 – Aug. 2014

Associate

Advised law firm on corporate mergers & acquisitions. Drafted documents and memorandum.

Addameer- Prisoners Support and Human Rights Association, Nazarath, Israel Summer 2011

Pro Bono

Assisted activists and lawyers in monitoring the judiciary, police, and other governmental institutions.

Israel Naval Forces, Israel 2008-2010

Human Resources Officer – Captain

Led a team of 10 soldiers in providing professional and financial advice in the Naval Corps Training Base.

Lawyers Committee for Human Rights, Beirut, Lebanon Sept. 2007–May 2008

Intern

Trained youths in the use of video equipment and interviewing techniques at the Palestinian Refugee camps in Lebanon for Witness, a LCHR film project.

UN Conference on Trade and Development, Geneva, Switzerland May – Aug. 2009

Intern

Researched and wrote on North-South inter-firm cooperation about construction.

LANGUAGES Hebrew, Arabic and French.

Sample LL.M. Resume—AfterGERALD GRAFF

222 West 121st Street, Apt. 3K | New York, NY 10027
 (212) 555-6677 | gdg323@columbia.edu

EDUCATIONColumbia Law School, New York, NY

LL.M., expected May 2019

Honors: Harlan Fiske Stone Scholar (for academic achievement)

Activities: RightsLink

Columbia Society for International Law
 American Civil Liberties Union
 Criminal Justice Action Network
 Career Symposium Committee

Comment [Office1]: You should consider adding a parenthesis with explanations of items on your resume that are not clear.

Comment [Office2]: Consider removing activities that the employer may consider unprofessional (e.g., wine club) or that seem conflict with the organization's mission.

The Interdisciplinary Center (IDC), Herzliya, Israel

Master of Law, LL.M., received June 2014

Honors: Second in class of 300 students
Law Review Editor-In-Chief

Bachelor of Law, LL.B. (equivalent to a J.D. degree), received 2013

Bachelor of Science in Financial Risk Management, received 2013

Honors: Research Assistant to Hon. Elisheva Barak, Vice President, Israeli National Labor Court

EXPERIENCENeighborhood Defender Services Externship

New York, NY

Student Participant

Sept. 2018-present

Provide legal assistance to incarcerated indigent criminal defendants. Work on felony motions, trial preparation, and sentencing memorandums.

Human Rights Watch

New York, NY

Legal Intern, Criminal Justice Project

Sept. 2018-present

Research effects of prison conditions, the incarceration of the mentally ill, sentencing, the death penalty, and drug law enforcement within the U.S. penal system. Participate in advocacy efforts and report writing.

Meitar Liquornik Geva & Leshem Brandweing LLP

Ramat Gan, Israel

Associate

Aug. 2017-Aug. 2018

Advised law firm on corporate mergers and acquisitions. Drafted documents and memorandum. Collaborated with senior executives on various legal matters.

Addameer—Prisoners Support and Human Rights Association

Nazareth, Israel

Intern

June-Aug. 2015

Assisted activists and lawyers in monitoring the judiciary, police, and other governmental institutions.

LANGUAGES Fluent in Hebrew and Arabic and proficient in French

Comment [Office3]: Don't just list the languages that you speak—you should indicate your proficiency as well.

Sample LL.M. Resume—Before

EMILIE SATROU

300 West End Ave., Apt. 8, New York, NY 10463, (212) 555 6985, sugarbaby@gmail.com

EDUCATION

Columbia Law School, New York, NY.

LL.M., expected May 2015

University College London (UCL), Faculty of Laws, London, UK.

LLB with French Law, First Class Honors, received June 2012

Activities: European Court of Human Rights Moot Court
Human Rights Bulletin, Writer and Editor
Finalist of the Social Debating Competition

EXPERIENCE

Honorary Mr Justice Silber of the High Court of England

Clerk

Researched and assisted in writing judgments.

London, UK.

Summer 2014

Immigration Law Department, Treasury Solicitors, Government Legal Service

Intern

Drafted briefs in cases concerning the right to privacy and the freezing of assets of suspect terrorists attended at the House of Lords and the Court of Appeals.

London, UK.

June 2013

Commission of Socio-Economic Rights, Amnesty International

Intern

Coordinated five photo stories.

Paris, France.

Oct 2012 - May 2013

Doughty Street Chambers

Mini-pupil

Assisted barristers with cases involving human rights issues.

London, UK.

Summer 2011

INTERESTS

Jogging, collecting rare porcelain dolls, car racing.

Sample LL.M. Resume—AfterEMILIE SATROU300 West End Ave., Apt. 8, New York, NY 10463, (212) 555 6985, es@columbia.eduComment [Office1]: Remember to use a professional email address on your resumeEDUCATION*Columbia Law School, New York, NY

LL.M., expected May 2019

Activities: European Union Law Moot Court team member
Columbia Society for International Law, Career Symposium CommitteeComment [Office2]: Make sure to include your law school activities. Employers care about these—especially if the activity is related to the work the employer does. Even if it isn't, it will make you appear to be a well-rounded candidate who takes initiative and pursues worthwhile interestsUniversity College London (UCL), Faculty of Laws, London, UK.

LLB with French Law, First Class Honors, received June 2016

Activities: European Court of Human Rights Moot Court, Founder and Moots Officer
Human Rights Bulletin, Writer and Editor
Finalist of the Social Debating CompetitionEXPERIENCE*Honorary Deborah Batts, U.S. District Court, S.D.N.Y.Intern*New York, NY
Sept. 2018-ongoing

Research and assist in preparing judicial decisions in cases on criminal law and employment law issues.

Comment [Office3]: Make sure to include all relevant work experience, volunteer, and intern positions in your "Experience" section, even if you have just started the position. Use verbs in present tense for any current positions.Honorary Mr. Justice Silber of the High Court of EnglandClerk*London, UK
June-Aug. 2018

Researched and assisted in the drafting and editing of judgments in cases on administrative law, immigration law and education law issues.

Immigration Law Department, Treasury Solicitors, Government Legal Service*Intern*London, UK
June 2018

Drafted briefs in cases concerning the right to privacy and the freezing of assets of suspect terrorists attended at the House of Lords and the Court of Appeals; drafted a memorandum advising the UK government on an immigration issue.

Comment [Office4]: If your resume has gaps (as this one does between June 2017 and June 2018), be prepared to explain the gap either in your cover letter or if asked in an interview.Amnesty InternationalIntern*Paris, France
Oct. 2016- May 2017

Coordinated five photo stories in various countries for the Dignity Campaign.

Doughty Street Chambers*Mini-Pupil*London, UK
June-Aug. 2015

Assisted barristers with cases involving human rights issues, including due process rights in criminal law cases and privacy rights in extradition cases.

LANGUAGE SKILLS

Fluent in French and English.

Comment [Office5]: Remember, there generally is no "Interests" section on a public interest resume. Be sure to include a "Languages" section if you are applying for jobs where language skills are useful.

Sample LL.M. Cover Letter and Resume Pairings

Agnes Kallaste
AgnesKallaste@law.columbia.edu

June 1, 2015

Fellowship Coordinator, SJI
Via Email

Dear Fellowship Selection Committee:

I submit this letter to express my interest in the Columbia Law School LL.M. Postgraduate Public Interest and Government Fellowship. I believe that my extensive academic coursework in international law and my professional experience in implementing human rights projects make me a strong candidate for this fellowship. I believe that the fellowship will allow me to develop practical lawyering skills, enhance my advocacy techniques, and gain further experience as an international human rights lawyer.

Growing up in a small Estonian village where women did not enjoy the same benefits as men, I learned the value and empowerment of inclusion and equal opportunity through education. Over the course of my academic experiences in law, including my Bachelor's, Master's, and LL.M. degree programs, I learned that it is not sufficient to possess knowledge of the law. It is equally important to utilize that knowledge to combat discrimination and protect the basic rights of other human beings.

Before coming to Columbia, I worked as a Program Manager with the Baltic Foundation, a non-profit organization based in Tallinn, Estonia, where I played a critical role in the development and implementation of human rights initiatives that improved the lives and working conditions of marginalized populations. Working in partnership with UN agencies, including UNICEF, UNDP and UN Women, I secured external funding, prepared impact statements, and provided on-the-ground support for internal and external stakeholders. Notably, I worked with UN Women in the "Women in Decision-Making" project to improve women's access to the Estonian government decision-making process at both local and national levels. In furtherance of these efforts, I developed new legal frameworks and policies that gave women a voice in the democratic process, resulting in the election of the first Roma female in the local council in an Estonian village. I strongly believe that my work with the Baltic Foundation provided new opportunities to come closer to the people who suffer discrimination and human rights abuses on different grounds and effectively address these issues in my work. One initiative that I supported is the "Platform for Gender Balance in Estonia." Through this program, I organized trainings on educating young Estonian women in the areas of human rights and personal empowerment.

At Columbia, I continued to expand my knowledge and experience working to advance women's rights. During the spring semester of my LL.M. program at Columbia Law School, I served as an extern with UN Women in New York. In this position, I reviewed the sexual discrimination policies and worked on establishing a new legislative framework for this institution. In addition, I reviewed contracts signed between UN Women and external donors to monitor compliance with the terms of the agreements.

The Columbia Law School LL.M. Postgraduate Public Interest and Government Fellowship will allow me to serve as a legal intern within the UN Peacekeeping Operations, Department of Field Support, Conduct and Discipline Unit. This department focuses on misconduct by individual UN staff members, including against native populations in countries where the UN maintains missions. As an intern, I will utilize my LL.M. degree and my experience with the Baltic Foundation to assist in the development of the zero tolerance policy on sexual exploitation and abuse, including researching and compiling the best practices of UN Member States in enforcing the zero tolerance policy.

Through this internship, I will continue my work in advancing human rights and learn new strategies about human rights protection and gender equality initiatives. I believe that the Columbia fellowship will allow me to leverage my academic background and expand my professional experience in the field of human rights advocacy, as well as my personal belief in providing equal opportunities for all. In the future, I hope to work with other NGOs and government organizations in Estonia and internationally, and I believe that the internship opportunity with the UN will provide me with the necessary legal research, legal writing and advocacy and government relations knowledge to become an effective public interest lawyer for individuals impacted by human rights violations.

I anticipate that the UN internship will start in the beginning of July and conclude toward the end of August with a possible one-month extension through the end of September. Thank you for your kind consideration of my application.

Sincerely,
Agnes Kallaste

AGNES KALLASTE

500 Riverside Drive, Apt. 54, New York, NY 10027
917.575.0189 · AgnesKallaste@law.columbia.edu

EDUCATION

Columbia Law School, New York, NY

LL.M., received May 2015

Honors: Parker School Certificate for Foreign and Comparative Law

Activities: Rightslink
Student Public Interest Network (SPIN)

Leiden University, Leiden, The Netherlands

M.A. in European Union Studies, received March 2013

Honors: Leiden University Excellence Scholarship

Activities: Platinum Category Bonn International Model United Nations
International ICC, 1st Place

University of Tartu, Tartu, Estonia

Bachelor of Law, received March 2009

Honors: Class rank: 2nd Place

EXPERIENCE

UN Women, New York, NY

Jan.-May 2015

Student Extern

Conducted legal analysis and research and assisted in the preparation of legal advice relating to UN Staff Regulations and Rules. Investigated internal policies and procedures of the organization.

Columbia University School of Law, New York, NY

Sep. 2014-May 2015

Research Assistant, Professor Anu Bradford

Conducted legal research and drafted memos focusing on EU competition law, EU normative power, and the impact of the EU Court of Justice on the legal systems of other countries.

Baltic Foundation, Talinn, Estonia

June 2011-July 2014

Program Manager

Organized the Baltic Partnership Civil Society Forum and served as the Moderator of “Democracy, Human Rights, Good Governance and Stability” working group. Worked in partnership with UN Women Estonia to implement the “Women in Decision-Making” project, resulting in the election of women into the national Estonian Parliament.

Transparency International, Talinn, Estonia

Jan.-Mar. 2012

Program Assistant

Coordinated the ‘Identifying and Training Paralegals in Rural Areas of Estonia’ project to provide pro bono legal advice to underrepresented populations, including women.

District Court, Tartu, Estonia

Jan. 2008-Dec. 2009

Law Clerk

Assisted the district court judge with analyzing legal issues in judicial proceedings. Reviewed court filings, prepared legal briefs for the judge, and liaised with counsel.

CONFERENCE PAPERS

Kallaste, Agnes, The TTIP Investment Court System – A Real Necessity or An Overlap?, Villanova Law School – 13th Inter-University Graduate Conference, Philadelphia, PA, April 2014

ADDITIONAL INFORMATION

Languages: Estonian (native), Russian (fluent), English (fluent), French (proficient)

Maria Luiza Teixeira
MariaLuizaTeixeira@gmail.com
646-859-9372

February 15, 2019

Ms. Ramona Silva
Chief of Staff
Inter-American Commission on Human Rights
Organization of American States
Washington, DC
Via Email

Dear Ms. Silva,

I write to express my interest in applying for a postgraduate internship with the Inter- American Commission on Human Rights (IACHR). As a Brazilian lawyer devoted to advancing the rights of groups historically subjected to intersectional forms of discrimination, I can attest to the vital importance of the IACHR in ensuring effective protection of human rights in the Americas, and how its multidimensional agenda is contributing to the achievement of major breakthroughs on the matter. I would be delighted to have an opportunity to apply my background and skills to contribute to advance this agenda.

In the last five years, I have used human rights law as tool to advocate for the rights of women with and without disabilities. From 2015 to 2018, as staff attorney at the Center for Justice and International Law, I was actively involved in several actions aimed at monitoring the situation of women's in economic, social and cultural rights (ESCR) in Brazil and other South American countries. I focused my attention on analyzing states' legal and policy frameworks on women's sexual and reproductive health and rights (SRHR).

Among other actions, under the supervision of the ESCR Area Coordinator, I was in charge of drafting the Access to Information on Sexual and Reproductive Health in Latin America report, which was presented to the IACHR during a thematic hearing held in June 2016. The preparation of this report was part of a joint strategy of civil society organizations working in nine regional countries. I was responsible for coordinating their efforts to collect relevant information at the domestic level. On the basis of this information, I drafted a report that assessed states' compliance with the standards set by the IACHR in its Access to Information on Reproductive Health from a Human Rights Perspective report. This experience strengthened my knowledge on these standards and my understanding of the challenges involved in monitoring their implementation.

I also had the opportunity to participate in several projects and initiatives to advance the rights of people with disabilities. In doing so, I learnt that states fail to recognize how the intersection of different identities results in particular patterns of human rights abuses against certain groups. For instance, states' failure to combine the gender and the disability perspectives explain why intersectional discrimination against women with disabilities remains invisible in their agendas. To contribute to change and innovation among Brazilian women's rights activists, I combined my research and advocacy on gender issues with my involvement in disability rights projects. Among other initiatives, I collaborated in strategic litigation that resulted in a precedent-setting decision recognizing the right of women with disabilities to have access to legal abortion, on an equal basis with other women. In addition, as a student of the Postgraduate Diploma "Women and Human Rights: Legal Advocacy Strategies," I conducted research on possible advocacy strategies to improve access to sexual and reproductive health services for women with disabilities in Brazil.

I have continued to pursue my interest as an LL.M. student at Columbia Law School. The lessons I have learned in the Human Rights Clinic reaffirm my belief that, in order to achieve my professional goals, I have to escape the "savage-savior-victim" framework which is so common among human rights advocates. Instead of rescuing women with disabilities, I have to contribute to empowering them to be the leaders in the struggle for their own rights. The clinic helps hone my skills to combine legal and non-legal tools to support this struggle. This year, I have had several opportunities to be involved in the work of regional and international human rights bodies, working with the Clinic's grassroots partners. In this role, I have witnessed a debate between representatives of academia, governments, the UN and the Inter-American human rights systems and civil society organizations about strategies to improve the functioning and deepen the impact of human rights bodies. By exposing me to the perspectives of a wide range of institutional and civil society actors, these experiences broaden my understanding of the challenges these bodies face in promoting respect for human rights, and the importance of strengthening cooperation and coordination among them to overcome these challenges.

As a postgraduate intern, I would be honored to have the opportunity to help the IACHR achieve a transformative impact on the observance and defense of human rights in the region. Upon completion of the internship, I am committed to continue supporting these efforts by working with civil society actors on the strategic use the Inter-American Human Rights System not only as a mechanism to obtain comprehensive reparations for victims of human rights abuses, but also as a tool to urge states to develop better legal and policy frameworks for the protection of human rights and the prevention of abuses.

Thank you in advance for your consideration of my application.

Sincerely,

Maria Luiza Teixeira

MARIA LUIZA TEIXEIRA314 West 127th Street, Apt. 2B

New York, NY 10027

MariaLuizaTeixeira@gmail.com | 646-859-9372

EDUCATIONColumbia Law School, New York, NY

LL.M., expected May 2019

Honors: LL.M. Human Rights Fellow
Fulbright ScholarUniversidad de Chile, Santiago de Chile, Chile

Postgraduate Diploma: Women and Human Rights: Legal Advocacy Strategies, received 2017

Thesis: *Advancing the Right to Sexual and Reproductive Health for Women with Disabilities: A Proposal for Brazilian Civil SocietyUniversidade Do Estado Do Rio De Janeiro, Rio De Janeiro, Brazil*Bachelor of Law, LL.B., received 2015*

Honors: Gold Medal for Highest GPA

EXPERIENCEColumbia Law School

New York, NY

Member of the Human Rights Clinic

Sept. 2018 - present

Participate in advocacy strategies to support communities opposing a gold mining project in Peru.

Collaborate in the preparation and dissemination of an assessment of the gold mine vis-à-vis World Bank standards. Conduct research on possible SDG indicators and draft a contribution to be submitted to the Working Group on the Issue of Discrimination Against Women in Law and in Practice.

Columbia Law School

New York, NY

Research Assistant to Prof. Sarah Cleveland

Jan. 2016 - present

Conduct research to assist Prof. Cleveland in assessing state reports submitted to the UN Human Rights Committee. Provide edits and comments to drafts lists of issues and views on individual communications.

Center for Justice and International Law

Sao Paulo, Brazil

Staff Attorney - Women's Rights Project

Sept. 2015 - July 2018

Monitored state policies on women's rights at the national and regional level. Cooperated with allied organizations in joint advocacy actions before state authorities and human rights bodies. Led the organization's efforts to advance rights for women with disabilities.

Coordinator - Inclusive Education Project

Jan. 2016 - July 2018

Conducted groundbreaking research on the educational situation of people with disabilities in Brazil. Coordinated a network of NGOs committed to advancing legal and policy changes to ensure an inclusive education system.

National Congress

Sao Paulo, Brazil

National Congress Commission for the Reform of the Civil Code

Jan. - Jun. 2018

Independent Legal Advisor on Gender and Disability Issues

Suggested changes to the draft codes' provisions regarding legal capacity, marriage, and consent to medical treatments.

Jebat Zainail
500 Riverside Drive, Unit 22A
New York, NY 10025
Jebatzainail@law.columbia.edu

March 26, 2012

Human Resources Manager
International Office of Migration
San Jose, Costa Rica
Submitted via online portal

Dear Sir or Madam,

I am writing to express my great interest in the Project Officer position in San Jose, Costa Rica, at International Organization for Migration (IOM). I have worked on migration issues throughout my career, and recently worked for the Office of Legal Affairs at IOM. I am completing a master's degree in international law and immigration law in May 2012, and would be honored to work on IOM's activities concerning border management in Costa Rica upon graduation, for which I can leverage all my past experiences and knowledge in immigration management and law.

During my previous work as a practicing lawyer focusing on migrants' rights, I promoted and managed various projects relating to immigration issues, particularly on detention, deportation and legalization of irregular migrants and asylum seekers. In the course of the projects, I regularly interacted and negotiated with the immigration authorities, along with other stakeholders including civil society, IOM and UNHCR. I acquired my skills in all aspects of project management, such as planning, implementation, reporting and finance, from my former experience and training as a consultant in global management consultancies, and also had field experience in Kakuma, Kenya, as a volunteer for UNHCR. Through my work and study, I have become thoroughly familiar with global and national migration policy issues, and learnt how various countries have dealt with irregular migration with different outcomes.

Moreover, I have thorough knowledge and expertise in the legal works at IOM, and am fully capable of undertaking all contractual works, as well as dispute resolution. In my previous work at LEG, I reviewed numerous contracts of all kinds, including donor agreements and implementation agreements, and wrote opinions and letters on cases of dispute resolution, in coordination with diverse sections of the HQ and regional offices. I am also aware of the issues involving recruitment of external staff and contractors, through an in-depth research that I conducted on the contracts and practices of various country offices.

I believe that I can contribute greatly to the work of the office in all aspects of its activities, particularly in project management, while also independently and comprehensively attending to all its legal and contractual matters. I would appreciate an opportunity to apply my background and skills to support and further the valuable and essential works of IOM in Costa Rica.

Thank you for your time and consideration.

Sincerely,

Jebat Zainail

JEBAT ZAINAIL

500 Riverside Drive, Unit 22A, New York, NY 10025

+1-718-514-3435

Jebatzainail@law.columbia.edu

EDUCATIONColumbia Law School, New York, NY

Master of Laws, received May 2012

Honors: Fulbright Scholar

Activities: Human Right Watch (Women's Rights Division), Intern

Research Assistant to Professor Sarah Cleveland and Professor Michael Doyle

Jalan University, Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia

Bachelor of Law, received Sept 2004

EXPERIENCEInternational Organization for Migration, Manila, Philippines

Jan. – June 2011

Legal Assistant (Intern), Office of Legal Affairs

Advised and drafted legal documents for other departments and field offices around the world in all aspects of their operations, including donor/implementation agreements, memoranda on partnerships and large-scale dispute resolution. Drafted internal policy guidelines for the use of human resource providers and developed a database for the office's internal knowledge management.

KL Public Law Office, Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia

Oct. 2006 – Dec. 2010

Partner, Foreigners and International Service Section

Represented migrants and refugees in courts and administrative hearings on a variety of cases including immigration, asylum, criminal, labor and family issues, mostly on legal aid and often in collaboration with NGOs and international organizations. Co-founded a branch office which was the first public-interest law office specializing in foreigners' rights and other international issues, designed its operational protocols including payroll and client management, and played a major role in the management of the office, supporting its co-directors, in its day-to-day operations.

Azziz Shariff Law Office, Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia

Oct. 2004 – Sept. 2006

Associate

Represented migrants and refugees in asylum applications, deportation hearings and criminal cases.

UNHCR, Kakuma, Kenya

July 2000 – Aug. 2000

Volunteer

Organized and led a workshop for local NGO staff on micro-projects for the refugees residing in the camps.

VOLUNTEER/PRO BONOMalaysian Lawyers Network for Refugees

April 2006 – Dec. 2010

Board Member

Organized symposia, published opinion papers and directly advocated with the Malaysian government as a network of lawyers involved in refugee protection. Supported members of the private panel of experts for the Minister of Justice on refugee issues to advocate for the improvement of RSD system. Participated in national and international dialogues on refugee issues, including Asia Pacific Consultation on Refugee Rights and UNHCR's Annual Consultations with NGOs.

Human Rights Protection Committee, Malaysia Bar Association

April 2006 – Dec.2010

Member, Foreigners' Rights Section

Negotiated with Ministry of Justice on immigration, refugee and detention issues, organized symposia, and drafted sections of its opinion papers, including shadow reports to treaty bodies, mostly on detention and refugee issues.

Lawyers Network for Foreigners

May 2008 – Dec. 2010

Vice Executive Officer

Organized seminars, managed a mailing list and built databases on court precedents and other information of practical use for lawyers in Malaysia relating to cases involving foreigners and other international issues. Launched and managed a quarterly newsletter on jurisprudence and other legal issues relating to foreigners.

Office of International Affairs, Malaysia Bar Association

March 2008 – Dec. 2010

Part-time Staff Attorney

Organized international conferences and meetings for national bar leaders, and drafted resolutions, formal communication letters and operational guidelines. Directly supported the executive board of the MBA in developing bilateral and multilateral relationships with other national bar associations, preparing for participation in international conferences, and promoting internationalization of its members.

PUBLICATIONS AND RESEARCH

- Comparative Research on Alternatives to Detention, an unpublished study commissioned to the Malaysia Bar Association by UNHCR (2010)
- A chapter on legitimation and its effect on visa status and citizenship in Malaysia in Latest Practice in International Family Law Cases, (2011).
- A chapter on international divorce and international juridical cooperation in Q&A International Family Law Case Study (2009).
- A chapter on immigration and other legal issues related to natural disasters for foreign residents in Malaysia in Legal Consultation on Natural Disaster Issues, (2007).
- “Lifelines” column, The KL Times, August 2007 to December 2009, Columns on various legal issues for foreign residents in Malaysia (eight articles in total).
- “Consultorio Jurídico” column, Revista Mercado Latino, January 2009 to January 2011, (Spanish). Monthly columns on various legal issues for foreign residents in Malaysia.

BAR ADMISSION

Admitted to practice in Malaysia in September 2004

LANGUAGES

Bahasa Malaysia (native), English (fluent) Spanish (fluent), French (intermediate)

FINAL WORDS: LL.M. NARRATIVES

Hearing from domestic and international public interest professionals about how they secured the jobs they currently have can give you valuable insight that will help you plan a successful job search. This is just one reason why you should reach out to Columbia Law School graduates. But until you do, here are the stories of a few Columbia Law School LL.M. graduates who have been successful in finding public interest work.

Amancio (Tutu) Alicante LL.M. '04 (Equatorial Guinea)

Originally from the island of Annobón, Equatorial Guinea, Tutu received his J.D. degree from the University of Tennessee College of Law in 2001. He then spent three years litigating violations of the Fair Labor Standard Act, the Agricultural Worker Protection Act and other unfair immigration related employment practice on behalf of migrant farm workers employed in the Deep South (Alabama, Arkansas, Louisiana, Kentucky, Mississippi and Tennessee) as Coordinator of the Migrant Poultry and Catfish Worker Justice Project, Equal Justice Fellow and then Staff Attorney for Southern Migrant Legal Services (SMLS). He also volunteered with the South Texas Pro Bono Asylum Representation Project (ProBAR), where he served as co-counsel on two successful asylum cases involving street children from Central America under deportation proceedings by the Department of Homeland Security.

In addition to his human rights work at the Law School, which included participating in the Human Rights Clinic, Tutu was a project team member on the Sao Tome and Principe Economic and Political Development Project at the University's School for International and Public Affairs. In this role, he helped to facilitate a post-national forum on the implementation of economic and political development and provided advice and technical assistance to the government of Sao Tome and Principe regarding oil revenue management regulations.

In 2007, he was named an Echoing Green Fellow- a two-year fellowship awarded to "individuals with innovative ideas for creating new models for tackling seemingly unsolvable social challenges" (for more information, visit the Echoing Green website), which he used to found EG Justice, a nonprofit organization dedicated to promoting human rights, the rule of law, and transparency and civic participation in Equatorial Guinea.

Since completing his LL.M. degree at Columbia, Tutu has been working on international human rights issues related to transparency and accountability in the extractive industry of the Gulf of Guinea. Tutu also has served on the Board of Directors of the Highlander Resource and Education Center in Tennessee, the Peace-Building and Demilitarization Program for the American Friends Service Committee (AFSC) in Philadelphia, and as a legal consultant for the Open Society Justice Initiative in New York.

Anna Marie Bulman LL.M. '15 (Australia)

Anna came to Columbia Law School with an LL.B. (First Class Hons.), a B.A. and a Dip. Lang. from the University of Adelaide, Australia. Before commencing her LL.M., she had worked for a top-tier corporate law firm in Australia and as a clerk for the Honourable Justice Gray in the Supreme Court of South Australia. As a former South Australian convenor for Australian Lawyers for Human Rights, Anna developed a passion for social justice through work at the North Australian Aboriginal Justice Agency and the Young Workers' Legal Service in Australia, and the Legal Resources Centre (LRC) in South Africa.

At Columbia Law School, Anna focused on the central role of food in global development, taking courses such as Law and Development, Global Food Systems at SIPA, and the Human Rights, Law, and Development Workshop. Outside of the classroom, she attended a World Bank conference on law, justice, and development in Washington, D.C., and organized a Law School discussion on "Food Democracy" with Olivier de Schutter, the former U.N. rapporteur on the right to food. During her second semester at the Law School, Anna joined the Columbia Center on Sustainable Investment as a legal intern on the organization's land and agriculture team—where she later worked over the summer on developing a searchable online database of land development contracts.

Anna graduated from Columbia Law School as a James Kent Scholar and the recipient of a David W. Leebron Human Rights Fellowship. As a Leebron Fellow, Anna returned to the LRC in South Africa where she spent a year and a half heading a right to food project in its Constitutional Litigation Unit. She assisted with ongoing customary rights litigation and other right to food-related cases, coordinated the organization's business and human rights work as it related to regional and international advocacy, and conducted a research project into the implementation of the National School Feeding Program in the Eastern Cape province which led to the production of an organizational report and advocacy booklet.

Following her fellowship, Anna undertook a short-term consultancy with the U.N. Special Rapporteur on extreme poverty and human rights, Professor Philip Alston. Anna then moved to Geneva to work in international agricultural trade at the World Trade Organization, before returning to New York to take up a full-time advisory position with Professor Alston in his capacity as Special Rapporteur, where she currently works. Anna's academic writing focuses on the human rights to food and adequate nutrition within international investment and human rights law, as well as international development more broadly.

Su Anne Lee LL.M. '17 (Malaysia)

A native of Malaysia, Su Anne received her LL.B. (Hons.) from the University of Sheffield in the United Kingdom, and began her career as a corporate and commercial lawyer in a leading Malaysian law firm. During her legal practice, she engaged in legal aid and pro bono work with the Kuala Lumpur Legal Aid Centre. She also volunteered extensively in various local and international NGOs throughout Asia Pacific—working with youth from rural villages in India, street children in Cambodia, migrants and minorities in Yunnan, China, and the stateless community in Sabah, Malaysia. These experiences shaped her desire to work in public interest, particularly with marginalized and underserved groups, and to explore how law might be used to advance social justice. After several years in private legal practice, Su Anne joined the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) in Malaysia, where she worked with refugees, stateless people, and victims of trafficking for six years, focusing on refugee protection and refugee status determination. In 2014, she worked as a consultant with UNHCR Hong Kong during the transitional period prior to the government assuming responsibility for asylum screening processes in Hong Kong.

Su Anne came to Columbia Law School as a Fulbright Scholar, a Catherine N. Niarchos Human Rights Scholar, and an LL.M. Human Rights Fellow. During her LL.M. degree, Su Anne worked with the Human Rights Clinic on a year-long project supporting local indigenous communities and activists in addressing corporate accountability for the environmental and human rights impacts of the extractives industry in Porgera, Papua New Guinea. Su Anne also conducted research focused on examining the right to work for refugees in Malaysia, analyzing laws and policies addressing mixed migration in Southeast Asia, and exploring the relationship between transitional justice mechanisms and refugee rights.

Su Anne graduated from Columbia Law School as a Harlan Fiske Stone Scholar and was awarded the Morrison & Foerster Public Interest Fellowship and the postgraduate Greater China Public Interest Fellowship. As a Morrison & Foerster Public Interest Fellow, Su Anne spent her summer at Human Rights Now, an international human rights NGO based in Tokyo, Japan, where she led research on human trafficking and forced labor in Southeast Asia, and victims' rights and reparations in the International Criminal Court.

As a Greater China Public Interest Fellow, Su Anne spent a year in Hong Kong working with PILnet: The Global Network of Public Interest Law. During her fellowship, Su Anne was responsible for designing and implementing PILnet's anti-human trafficking initiatives in Hong Kong and other jurisdictions in Asia, particularly through leveraging the resources and expertise of private sector lawyers to provide legal support to anti-trafficking NGOs. She also managed PILnet's pro bono clearinghouse in Hong Kong; built pro bono partnerships, developed pro bono practice within law firms and expanded legal capacity among NGOs and social enterprises in Hong Kong.

Tehtena Mebratu-Tsegaye LL.M. '14 (Sierra Leone/UK)

Tehtena earned her LL.B. from the University of Oxford, and subsequently completed her Postgraduate Diploma in Legal Practice at the College of Law, London. Before starting the LL.M. at Columbia Law School Tehtena trained as a solicitor at an international law firm where she worked on finance, energy, and infrastructure projects from the firm's London and Singapore offices.

At Columbia Tehtena focused on public international law and human rights. As part of the Human Rights, Law, and Development workshop she worked with a PILnet fellow on a project related to the rights of people living with disabilities in Nigeria. She also took part in a SIPA Capstone for Tanzania's anti-corruption bureau, that focused on Tanzania's natural gas sector. While at Columbia Tehtena also interned with the Columbia Center on Sustainable Investment, focusing on a project on human rights impact assessments in the context of large-scale investment projects.

On completion of the LL.M. Tehtena joined the Open Foundations as an Aryeh Neier Justice Initiative fellow. At the Open Society Justice Initiative, Tehtena worked primarily on research and strategic litigation related to anti-corruption in the context of natural resources and aid flows, as well as freedom of information projects. In addition, she contributed to litigation on the right to truth in Mexico, and the right to protest in South Africa. As part of her fellowship, Tehtena went on to work with Namati as a legal consultant, based in their Freetown office. With Namati Tehtena worked with paralegals and lawyers to represent rural landowners and land users in their interactions with large-scale land-based investors and extractives companies.

Tehtena joined the Columbia Center on Sustainable Investment in 2016 as a Legal Researcher. Her work with the Center focuses on carrying out research, conducting trainings, and providing advice to governments and civil society on legal frameworks that govern extractive industries and large-scale land-based investments. Her work also focuses on the impacts of extractive industries and large-scale land-based investments on land rights and human rights.

Sofia Minieri LL.M. '16 (Argentina)

Sofia completed her law degree at Universidad Torcuato Di Tella, Argentina, in 2011. After graduating, she worked as a staff attorney at Asociación por los Derechos Civiles, a leading nongovernmental organization in Argentina. There, she advocated for the rights of women both domestically and in other Latin-American countries from an intersectional perspective. She focused her attention on monitoring normative and policy frameworks on sexual and reproductive rights for women with and without disabilities and collaborated with local and regional nongovernmental organizations in the implementation of advocacy strategies aimed at advancing these rights.

At Columbia Law School, Sofia had the opportunity to explore how to develop innovative strategies to advance the rights of women, by taking courses such as Gender Justice, International Human Rights Advocacy and the Human Rights Clinic. She was a research assistant for Professor Victor Rodriguez Rescia, in his capacity as member of the U.N. Human Rights Committee. She also worked at the Law School's Human Rights Institute in its efforts to inform the Review of the Human Rights Treaty Bodies System.

Sofia received the Leebron Human Rights Fellowship to work at Red por los derechos de las personas con discapacidad (National Network for the Rights of People with Disabilities). The primary goal of her year-long project was to establish a coalition of disability rights groups, feminist organizations and individual advocates devoted to advancing sexual and reproductive rights for women with disabilities in Argentina. To help inform the coalition's advocacy goals and strategies, Sofia authored two reviews. The first report described the content and scope of sexual and reproductive rights for women with disabilities and a state's obligations to meet them, while the second assessed whether, and to what extent, Argentina guarantees full enjoyment of these rights.

At the end of her fellowship year, Sofia joined the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights (IACHR) where she currently serves jointly as a fellow for the Rapporteurship on the Rights of Women and in the Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression. Her work focuses on deepening member states' understanding of the scope of their obligations to eradicate violence and discrimination against women, and strengthening state officials' capacity to effectively implement related international and regional standards. She also is co-drafting a report on the impact of gender-based violence and discrimination on the right to freedom of expression for female journalists.

Deepa Nambiar LL.M. '13 (Malaysia)

Trained as a lawyer, Deepa practiced in corporate litigation in her native Malaysia for four years after obtaining her LL.B. (Hons) from the University of London. While in legal practice, Deepa simultaneously pursued her passion in social justice issues as an active member of the Bar Council Human Rights Committee, where she drafted a complaint on the status of women in Malaysia which was submitted to the Commission on the Status of Women as part of the U.N. Universal Periodic Review, co-organized a forum with UNICEF on the right to education for children in Malaysia, and was involved in public interest litigation and public inquiries into human rights violations on behalf of the Bar Council. She also developed an interest and passion in refugee rights, mentoring a refugee family in Kuala Lumpur, and regularly providing pro bono legal advice to refugees in Malaysia who were undergoing status determination procedures in the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR).

Keen to pursue a full-time career in human rights, Deepa joined the LL.M. program at Columbia Law School on a Fulbright Scholarship, with a particular focus on international law and human rights. As part of the Gender and Sexuality Law Clinic, she researched and drafted a report for the New York Anti-Trafficking Network on human rights-based alternatives to sex-offender registration and community notification legislation for trafficking- and prostitution-related offenses in the U.S. In her second semester, she was selected for the U.N. Law and Policy course, where she authored a paper on the enhancement of refugee protection in Southeast Asia through United Nations human rights mechanisms, which was subsequently published in a law review in Malaysia. She also externed with the Independent Expert to the U.N. Committee against Torture, Ms. Felice Gaer, analyzing State Parties' compliance with the committee's recommendations. In her time in New York, she completed internships with Human Rights Watch and the Permanent Mission of Malaysia to the United Nations, and graduated as a Harlan Fiske Stone Scholar in 2013.

Upon completing the LL.M., Deepa returned to Malaysia and joined UNHCR as a Protection Associate conducting Refugee Status Determination for refugees. She then founded and launched Asylum Access Malaysia, the Malaysia office of an international refugee human rights nonprofit organization that uses legal empowerment and policy advocacy to improve refugee rights. As Country Director, she developed and led advocacy strategies to advance refugee policy in Malaysia, including through the use of international human rights mechanisms, and led all its programs and operations. In 2016, she was elected as Chair of the Southeast Asia Working Group of the Asia Pacific Refugee Rights Network (APRRN), responsible for the development and coordination of APRRN's strategies in Southeast Asia. In 2018, she joined the International Detention Coalition, a global network of over 400 civil society organizations and individuals in almost 90 countries that advocate for, research and provide direct services to refugees, asylum-seekers and migrants affected by immigration detention. As the Asia Pacific Regional Coordinator, she coordinates the activities of members in the region. She is regularly invited to speak at international, regional and domestic events on issues surrounding refugee rights and forced migration in Malaysia and the broader region.