RESEARCH FOR THE LL.M. DEGREE, L6691

Check this box and complete this section if you are undertaking research separate from a course or seminar (independently with a faculty member).

Supervised research entails writing a research paper independently of any course under the supervision of a Columbia Law School faculty member (including clinical, visiting, and adjunct faculty) who agrees to supervise the work and grade the paper on the A-B-C-F scale. The paper must be worth at least two points of academic credit and 20+ pages in length.

Rules for L6691:

- 2-6 academic points; maximum of eight (8) academic points toward the LL.M. Degree
- Letter grade required
- Registration due by the end of Add/Drop

SUPERVISED RESEARCH: COURSE RELATED, L6689

Check this box and complete this section if you are seeking permission to write a longer research paper as part of a course or seminar.

A student enrolled in a seminar that requires a research paper may seek the instructor's permission to write 10-15 additional pages for one additional point of academic credit. In the case of a 2-credit seminar, the student will earn a total of three points of academic credit—two for the seminar and one for the additional work done on the paper. The student must register the additional point as Supervised Research: Course Related, L6689.
