POSTGRADUATE JOB SEARCH GUIDE

Below are resources for your search for a public interest, government, or human rights job. We highly encourage you to speak with a Social Justice Initiatives (SJI) advisor for advice navigating the search process.

Connecting to Your Community

SJI advisors are available to provide advice on navigating the search process, review application materials, and conduct mock interviews. That includes our NYC-based advisors as well our remote network of advisors who can provide insight into local job markets and public interest organizations in their area.

The quarterly SJI Alumni Newsletter includes public interest news, events for graduates, and information on fellow alumni on the move. Sign up today!

LinkedIn is a great tool for tapping into the Columbia Law School network. Join the Public Sector Alumni-Student Connections Group and connect directly with SJI Grad Advisor Tory Messina, SJI Dean Erica Smock, and other SJI advisors. LinkedIn also includes job listings.

You may also want to check out the Alumni Community*, a database of all Columbia Law School graduates, including the “Social Justice Initiatives Group,” a community of more than 600 graduates committed to public interest and public service.

Our Public Interest Job Search Toolkit* is a useful resource for guidance on updating resumes, drafting cover letters, fine-tuning networking and public interest interviewing skills, and more. SJI’s Job Search Tools page has many other helpful resources for graduates, including the International Supplement to the Toolkit, for those seeking international jobs, and the LL.M. Supplement.”

Tracking Job Positions

When looking for a position, there is no substitute for networking with people who work at organizations and in jobs that interest you; however, the following websites can help you learn what opportunities are out there and what roles most interest you. Most let you sign up for alert emails based on your criteria.

PSJD: The Public Service Jobs Directory is the primary resource for the public interest legal job market. Search for employers and jobs by location, subject matter, or other terms. PSJD also aggregates local and state government opportunities. Getting full access to PSJD.org requires creating an account.

Symplicity*, the Law School’s job website, lists postgraduate job postings shared by employers specifically interested in Columbia graduates.

Idealist is an online platform with a mission to connect “idealists”—people who want to do good—with opportunities for action and collaboration. It lists both legal volunteer and job opportunities with nonprofits and governments in the U.S. and internationally.

USAJobs connects job seekers with federal employment opportunities across the U.S. and around the world.

The Clinical Legal Education Association offers information about clinical teaching and job postings. The Columbia Law School Careers in Law Teaching Program is a resource for graduates pursuing careers in academia.

The Association of Corporate Counsel is an international bar association comprised solely of in-house attorneys. They post job listings, including for nonprofit organizations.

Philanthropy News Digest job listings are a service of the Foundation Center and focus on jobs, including legal jobs, at nonprofits.

Inside Higher Ed and HigherEdJobs have jobs boards with opportunities for those who wish to work at law schools and other colleges and universities in roles that include teaching, administration, and traditional legal counsel.

The United Nations, the UNDP (including UN Volunteers), and Amnesty International list their own job openings. The Leitner Center for International Law and Justice at Fordham Law School publishes newsletters with job listings for law graduates.
